Merry Christmas, Jeff!

How are you? Are you surprised to get a letter from me? I sure have been thinking of you a lot this season. I know that it hasn’t been the easiest time for you or your family. Sometimes it can be difficult to do as you are expected to. I see that you have struggled with being mouthy to your parents. I also notice that you especially need to work on not picking on your sister. I understand that it isn’t easy for you, but it is very important that you improve these behaviors for your sake as well as your family’s sake. Everyone would benefit from this extra effort, most importantly you. We both know you can do better. Impress me!

It is so beautiful here at the North Pole this time of year. As I sit here looking out the window, sipping on my hot chocolate, I realize that you are already 8 years old. Wow, how the time does seem to fly just as fast as Rudolph. You have a good heart, Jeff. Always listen to your heart’s inner voice when deciding what to do and how to behave.

I know that you are really hoping for new computer games and a bike this year. I need for you to do me a favor and work on behaving better. Though I can’t make any promises, if I can see the improvement and feel that you will continue to work on that even after Christmas, I will see what I can do about getting those gifts ready and into the sleigh on time.

Your best friend, Biff, is also getting excited about Christmas. Tell him that I have something special in mind for him. I look forward to visiting both of you this Christmas.

Well, my elves are calling me. It seems we have a bit of an emergency in the workshop I must attend to.

Be good and happy this season.

Your friend,

P.S. Keep playing the drums!
